'Trading Against the Crowd' - Mr. John F. Summa

Efficient market theorists contend that markets are random and thus not predictable. However, many of today's professional money managers rely on investor sentiment for improved market timing. They know that at the extremes of market sentiment, markets tend to be the most predictable. Through his studies, Mr John Summa, a noted author, economist and professional trader, convincingly shows that investor sentiment can be incorporated into profitable stock and stock market trading systems. In this talk, Mr Summa will explain how to use popular gauges of crowd psychology, such as put/call ratios, option-implied volatility, short sales, investor surveys, and advisory opinion to trade against, or contrary to, prevailing market sentiment.

Speaker

John F. Summa operates his own commodity pool and managed account program. He is an NFA-registered commodity trading advisor (CTA) and licensed, series-3 options broker. In 1997, Mr Summa founded one of the first option advisory web sites. He has also established a new trading advisory site recently. Mr Summa is the co-author of Options on Futures: New Trading Strategies and Options on Futures Workbook, both published by John Wiley & Sons. Mr Summa regularly writes for Investopedia.com and has published his trading ideas in Technical Analysis of Stocks & Commodities magazine and Futures magazine. A former professional skier, Mr Summa also holds a master's degree in economics from the prestigious Graduate Faculty at New School University in New York City.
